11:40a – 12:30p ET	OPENING REMARKS Josh Landau, President, IIS INSURTECH, DIGITAL TRANSFORMATION AND INTERCONNECTION Insurance has often been talked about as a place where innovation goes to die. Yet the activities of major insurers worldwide to address the ongoing digital transformation revolution, the ever-increasing range and numbers of insurtechs seeking to bring technical solutions to this vital industry allied to capabilities being developed to connect all parties together in a more effective way, may be on the verge of changing this view. If we combine this with the effects that Covid has had on an industry dominated by personal interaction, where home working is currently the new normal, and where collaboration tools have become business-as-usual, we see an external force acting upon the industry. Digital operation is no longer a marketing concept – it is no longer an attempt to be imitate Amazon – it is no longer a shift to mass-customize any insurance product - it has become a major factor in determining whether an industry player can survive or not. The purpose of the panel is therefore to consider the effects of insurtech beyond addressing survival issues that the industry has navigated so skillfully over the last six months. PANEL Moderator: James Maudslay, Global Head of Insurance, Equinix Chris Cheatham, CEO, RiskGenius Jeff Berezny, Senior Vice President & General Manager, Trov Jamie Yoder, President, Snapsheet
